Grand Army Excursionists Will Go Further Than the Capital Has Authorized.

Grand Army Excursionist Not Up for Public Use Without the Encouragement They Expect—Engineers at Panama—At the Capital, Esperanza Style—Rich Secretary Whitney Bought a Housetrack—At Washington Congressional Circles.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 29.—(Special.)—Grand Army men and the other Decoration Day visitors are quite shearing styles of entertainment. The usual great, turbulent time is to be somewhat subdued. The carnival of a vast quantity of money from a hesitant people will be had, and has been made at Washington, but the celebration of national events—is, of course, encouraging to the democratic politicians in the North. The democratic statesmen still do not feel sure enough of their ground to be certain that they are settled in the saddle for the next four years, and they are anxious to use the veterans for the purpose of consolidating their party in the northern part of the continent. The Albany law made the Decoration celebration a holiday, and the Democratic politicians of that State are expected to spend about $1,000 a day. Others depended on the visit of the Grand Army to fill their pockets with the money of the visitors, and even the Democratic politicians of Washington, who are not settled in the saddle for the next four years, but have a reasonable income from the Government as a rule, have counted

HILL AND THE PRESIDENCY

SOMEBODY ABOUT THE STRENGTH OF NEW YORK'S GOVERNOR.

His Popularity and Hold upon the Own State Unquestioned, and He Could Control the Electoral Vote of the State, but Not Even Hill Could Control Enough Democratic Votes in Connecticut to Give Success to Harrison and the White House, and Two of the Other Have to Be Overcome.

ALBANY, N. Y., May 29th.—[Special.]—Less than a year from the last week of the convention to the National Convention of the Democratic party will have been chosen, and it will then be known whether the Democracy intend to trample Grover Cleveland into a republican who represents to him and proclaim the declaration that to the victors belong the spoils. It is generally acknowledged that if an available candidate cannot be had in the West Cleveland's nomination would rank to his support, depriving their own purpose with the vast that the West would both competitors. In such an event the south would be inclined to favor Hill. But the candidate is not available. The strong men whose names would receive enthusiastic support are all supporters of the administration. Every available man in the West as well as the leaders in the South favor a second term for the President. Governor Boies, Governor Gibson, and other prominent candidates in the West, the Democratic electors have their own interest for their own. There is not a majority of available leaders in the East. New Jersey doesn't want of any Massachusetts wishes no claim. Connecticut has nothing hopeful from Senator. New Hampshire has only Frank Jones. Vermont looks to Democrat of National fame, and in none of the doubtful states of the West is there any opportunity or encouragement for Hill. Even in New York it is doubtful if Hill could carry the state in a contest of popularity in which managers of the two parties are pitted against each other. The fact is the Democratic managers of the state are not in sympathy with Hill's candidacy, and they would not be willing to make the sacrifices necessary to secure the nomination. Hill's strength is with the people, and not with the politicians. He has been defeated by the politicians in his own party, and they would not be willing to make the sacrifices necessary to secure the nomination. BILL NYE AND JAY GOULD.

THE HUMORIST PAYS HIS RESPECTS TO THE RAIL PHILANTHROPIST.

[Special Dispatch to The Tribune.]

NEW YORK, May 29.—I had been two long years since I last met Jay Gould until I called upon him yesterday to renew the acquaintance and discuss the happy past. You will remember that my earnest endeavors on my part, the years of philanthropy on his part, have lived long in the pure and grateful memories. Both of us have changed in that time. Each of us has changed more than I think. Perhaps that is because he has been more in contact with change than I have.

Well, I had hoped a good deal in those years, for when I called on Irvington yesterday Mr. Gould did not remember me. Neither did the servant who admitted me. Neither did the little boy who commenced dog to the front gate. Mr. Gould came to comfort, in a flannel shirt, surrounded by help and a barbed wire fence.

My meeting with my children, instead of having the chilling effect especially for which, by the way, I had sacrificed so much, seemed to arouse a good deal of interest in them. Each one of them asked to be shown.

Carefully concealing the fact that I had any business relations with the press, I gave my card to the person who does chores for Mr. Gould and apologizing for not having prepared it before, I took a seat in the opera house to wait for the great railroad magnate.

Mr. Gould entered the room, with a tall, pensive way and looked the card to a pencil way and yet with the air of a monarch.

"I know that I have never had the pleasure of meeting you before, sir," said the great railroad magnate and amateur philanthropist, with a touch of sarcasm in his voice.

"No, sir, we have never had the pleasure," I replied, carefully concealing my figure over the back of the chair in order to show him that I had not been in the habit of wearing a coat.

"You are not aware that you have ever met me in the capacity of a reporter, are you?" he continued in the same sarcastic tone.

"No, sir, I am not aware that I have ever met you in the capacity of a reporter," I replied, with a look of surprise that I hoped would be seen by the man working in the rolling mill at Lawrence, Mass., and you seem to start the Lawrence Company. You do not remember of having had a personal interview with me in the office of the Lawrence Company, do you?"

"No, sir, I do not remember of having had a personal interview with you in the office of the Lawrence Company. I have not had the pleasure of meeting you before, sir."

"Well, I thought I would call and see you, as I have been very much interested in the Lawrence Company, and I have been very much interested in the Lawrence Company, and I have been very much interested in the Lawrence Company, and

SOMEBODY ABOUT WHOM THE ATTENTION OF NEW YORK'S GOVERNOR.

His Popularity and Hold upon the Democratic Organization, and His Could Secure the Chairmanship of the Ways and Means Committee in the House and Would Control the Federal Patronage in This Section—Hill and the White House, and How to Be Nominated.

ALBANY, N. Y., May 29.—[Special.]—Governor Hill is a name that has been mentioned in connection with the Presidency more frequently than any other man in the Democratic party. He will have been chosen, and it will then be known whether the Democracy will look to Governor Hill or Governor Cleveland for a candidate who represents in spirit and principle the Jacksonian doctrine that is the cohesive power binding the party. It is generally acknowledged that if an available candidate cannot be found in the Democratic party except in the West Cleveland's nomination would be the result. Regarding their own interests, the Democrats of the West would look to the record, regarding their own interests, the Democrats of the West would look to the record, regarding their own interests, the Democrats of the West would look to the record,

HOW HUMOROUS TALKS ARE RECEIVED BY THE HIGH PHILANTHROPIST.

In the Feeling Acquaintance Slightly Resembling Each Antipode That Was Not Apparent—Changed Thoughts by a Change of Circumstances—A Few Words on Subscription as a Millionaire and His Progress—A Rich Man's Paradise to Paradise.

New York World: It had been too long since I paid Mr. Jay Gould much attention, and I called upon him yesterday to renew the acquaintance and discuss the happy past. You know of course that I am a humorist, and have been for years. Not that I am funny myself, but others are so much funnier than I am that they make me look like a humorist. Some of my friends claim that I am a philanthropist on this account, but I have always refused to be classed as a philanthropist. Both of us have changed in that respect, though Jay has changed more than I have. I believe that is because he has been more in contact with change than I have.

Well, I had thought a good deal in those years, for when I called at Irvington years ago on the matter that commenced my trip to the Pacific coast, Mr. Gould lived in Fordham on the Harlem road. He moved from there to Irvington, to a short term, surrounded by help and a forked iron fence.

In leaving Fordham Mr. Gould, instead of having the fencing taken especially for him, left it for the next resident to secure a good article of fencing with which he is entirely satisfied.

Carefully avoiding the fact that I had any financial relations with the press, I gave Mr. Gould and apologizing for not having dropped in before, I took a seat in the open door to wait for the great railroad magnate.

Mr. Gould entered the room, with a low, pleasant coal and locked the door in a quiet way that put me with the air of a mesmerist.

"I believe that I have never had the pleasure of meeting you before, sir," said the great railroad magnate and amateur philanthropist with a tinge of national irony.

"No, sir, but about two years ago," I said, lightly running my fingers over the back of the chair in order to show him that I was accustomed to the sight of a stove. "I was then working in the rolling mill at Laramie, and you came to visit the Union Pacific Railroad Company. I did not see you personally, but I saw your gardener at all times of the day, and I saw your coachman at all times of the night, and I saw your—"

"Ah, yes, I remember," said Mr. Gould, with a look of pain on his face, as though he had suddenly remembered that he had left the gas burning in the bathroom. "I remember now. I have been so much in society since then that I had forgotten it. Let me see, you were employed in the rolling mill, were you? Well, I am glad to see you getting along so well. I suppose you have a family?"

"Yes, sir, I have been married for the last two years, and I have a little girl who looks like you. She has your eyes, Mr. Gould, and your nose, and your mouth, and your chin, and your—"

"Ah, yes, I see," said Mr. Gould, as the blood began to rise to his face. "Remarkable child, I suppose. Very bright, indeed.

Violent earthquake shocks were experienced yesterday in Mexico, but no fatalities are reported.

The remains of the late Rev. Forney Hunt were yesterday taken from Washington to Boston. There were no funeral services at the National Capital.

The Treasury Department at Washington is at work on what will be the largest single money vault in the world. It will hold $60,000,000 silver dollars, and the vaults surrounding the treasury will be four feet six inches thick.

Gen. Sherman C. Rogers is dangerously ill of exhaustion in Little Rock. His physicians say he cannot recover. Gen. Rogers is one of the most prominent men in response to the Brown-Baxter war he commanded the Brooks troops.

It is rumored that Count Karoly, the Austro-Hungarian Ambassador to London, will resign his position after the Queen's jubilee. The reasons are said to be personal and not political. Count Wydenbruck, the Ambassador at St. Petersburg, is the probable successor to the Court of St. James.

The Czar of Russia has issued a ukase prohibiting absentees awaiting real property in Russian Poland. The heir of a foreigner, in order to inherit, must become a naturalized Russian. The law excludes great holdings in Servia and Turkey and will be much the subject of a vigorous diplomatic discussion.

Information that will be promptly observed by Chicago today and tomorrow will be important. The Board of Trade, banks, City Hall, County Building, and all the leading firms will remain closed. Services will be held at Bethesda, Tripoliant, Calvary, and Calvinistic Churches. The ceremonies will be held early, giving time for the various organizations to participate in the general parade.

Professor Goldwin's fitting sermon in the Advocate has done far more good than words, so far as visitors are concerned. I suppose the Chief Executive strolled about the hotel and chatted with the guests. The ladies of the Presidential party went to the church near the Prospect House and, in the absence of a clergyman, held a singing service for an hour.

On the London Stock Exchange during the last week business was inactive, but there was an upward movement, showing well for strength in all departments after the holidays. Higher national securities were held throughout the week and closed heavy. Decrease on the Paris Bourse became active on the report of the formation of a Cabinet, and all prices closed strong. In Berlin there were numerous speculative dealings in Russian securities.

THE DOUBLE ATTACK.

The wheat crop and the hoisting engine have formed the chief topics of conversation during the last week in local business circles, and have attracted as small amount of attention outside this city. The former is rapidly developing facts of the greatest importance, touching the future of the American farmer. The reaction at this point have attracted nearly 10,000 bushels per diem, with more than half a million promised for today, and for the greater part of it is staging here. The export movement continues active, and it is estimated that arrangements have been made to ship over 15,000,000 bushels from the Atlantic seaboard during June. But it goes from other interior points, where prices are not so high as in this city, though they are showing much better figures than will be brought prices a few weeks ago. It now appears very probable that the persons who control the Chicago market will sustain it through next month, whatever they may allow it to do in July, and that one-tenth of the left to the grasp of us much wheat as our warehouses can be found room for, when the tough season will empty all the other elevators in the West, leaving an unusually small visible surplus at the end of the crop year, and nearly all of it in Chicago. The prospect for this surplus being in the future tradesmen is good to have talked the making of arrangements for large additions to the local capacity for grain storage.

These conditions form the principal causes for the continued closeness of the local breadstuffs market. The large amounts now locked up by the carrying of produce may be said further increased by the presence of the same amount of new wheat, and this makes trading very strong just at the time of year when they are usually the severest. The banks are taking care of their superabundant currency, however, at fewer rates of discount, though to most of those the great problem of the future seems to be how to steer clear of greater stringency in the near future. The market would probably be much closer now but for the fact that trading for building purposes is almost down to the minimum point in this city. There are no signs of a speedy change in the aspect, and it may be that the commission among permanents will continue till the produce passes out of sight and hands. In strong contrast with an unusually low rate of interest in this city for the use of money is an average rate of about 6 to 8 per cent. with increasing tendency that, over the boundaries in Lacon, which is charged to the very best men of a quarter of 1 per cent. for the term of three months.

Stocks in Wall street have been generally dull through the week, but with a firm undertone, though not to have good reason why the advance should be lost. The strength in the other direction. The earnings of the principal railroad have fallen a large amount under the figures of a year ago, but the gross are slightly the best figure of the five half of the month, and record events in the Northwest point very significantly to the possibility that the Transfer embargo may have to be revived in the interests of the great public which pays transportation charges. There is another reason for present hesitation in the Congress, arising out of the fact that those states are in large part controlled by Chicago capital, which is very sensitive for the purpose of carrying wheat, should distress prove to be the result. Such fear, however, have no advocate of that a great many loaded cars are constantly on the line, and this has been the situation for a fortnight past, the moving capacities not apparently considering the necessity of further relieving their predecessors.

The prominent item of commercials ought to post a satisfactory condition of affairs. Despite some of them feel otherwise and quite as prompt as a few months ago. Groceries, sugars, tea, and coffees. The last named is having the week, and sellers in the trade look this are good for a substantial rise yet. There are some encouragements about the positivity of legislation to relief to duties on the first of the month, comparing favorably with those of a year ago. Millinery and ready-made clothing are quiet, while boots and shoes are reasonably active. There is a little moving in iron, with a good inquiry for heavy lots to be delivered in the future, but no change in quotations. Harware is quiet, as is usual at this date, the case for breadstuffing coming along later in the season, and sells are not much wanted, owing to the building delay. This, however, does not prevent a good demand for leaders, and that has to understand a by and profitably, business by reason of its connection with the wheat crops. Leathers are mostly dull, with a wider margin between hemlock and the Atlantic seaboard. The makers are mostly out, with the exception of that a great many loaded cars are constantly on the line, and this has been the situation for a fortnight past, the moving capacities not apparently considering the necessity of further relieving their predecessors.

SUNDAY MORNING'S NEWS.

THE CITY.

IN GENERAL.

The ladies of Primrose Lodge, Sons of St. George, presented the members of that organization with a splendid banner which will be used for the first time in the forthcoming address of welcome to be delivered by Grand Master Alderman Lake this (Monday) night.

Early Sunday morning the Employes' steam yacht sailed for Green Bay to take Messrs. Ely, Gen. Washington street, Silas Farrar, jr., No. 48 West Lake street, and Francis Gray, No. 48 West Washington street, and the members of the Board of Education, who are to inspect the new schools there, on their annual visit.

Inspector Jacob Duffy of the Harrison Street Station received from Kankakee yesterday the will found in the pocket of Thomas Conway, who was run over by a train and killed in that city Saturday night. Conway's mother lives in this city, and the will was probably brought here. It was dated April 20, 1887, and bequeathed his property to his mother.

The ladies of the Kirkside Park Improvement Association have arranged for a picnic to be given in the grove at Kirkside Park, on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, on Saturday, June 11. Tickets for the round trip will be sold at the depots of the road for 50 cents.

While Louis Barca was sitting in front of No. 56 West Erie street at midnight Saturday waiting for a friend a man named Henry Ross, with whom he had had a quarrel, came up and, without any provocation, struck Barca in the face with a hammer, inflicting a severe wound. Ross was taken to the Harrison Street Station.

A team of large bay horses, worth $300, belonging to J. H. Bostwick, a contractor at the corner of Franklin street and Chicago avenue, broke away from Bostwick's carriage in front of the store of Hoyne & Leigh, No. 92 Wabash avenue, and ran down Chicago avenue to Dearborn street, where they crashed into the bridge, which was then opening. They plunged into the river and were drowned.

The contestants of the Kirkside for one more evening will be a pleasure partaker to their Management present this week Saturday night to see Daly Little Miss Hoyt, Miss Rose Eytinge and Messrs. J. Forbes Robertson, E. J. Buckley, Frederick Paulding, Frederick Bond, Schneider and Conway in the comedy of "Diplomacy." Next week Mr. Daly will present Miss Ada Rehan in a new play, "Love in Harness," by Mr. Augustus Thomas, and Miss Rehan will appear in her favorite part of Peggy Chesney in "Dollars and Cents."

Dr. John E. Rutherford was committed to the county penitentiary for six months yesterday by Judge Gary, on the charge of obtaining money under false pretenses. The complaint was made by Mrs. Mary Ann Hoyt, of No. 1,000 West Madison street, who alleged that the doctor had induced her to pay him $100 for the purpose of procuring her admission to the Cook County Hospital, which he failed to do.
